

Kashrus Conscience

West Coast Shopping and Dining

EATING OUT

Coffee shops

Unflavored coffee does not present a Kashrus problem. This includes the various roasts, i.e. French roast, Spanish roast etc. Flavoring always needs a good Hashgacha. Some coffee shops such as Starbucks have the flavoring in a bottle and one can check for Kosher certification on the label. Those that use flavored beans would need a good Hashgacha on the roasting house. The addition of milk is not a problem beyond Cholov Stam in countries when one can rely on the milk being Kosher. Half and Half needs Hashgacha when it contains preservatives. One should drink the coffee in a disposable cup as the mugs used may be used for non- kosher hot coffee as well. An additional concern that has arisen is the washing of coffee pots in a non- Kosher dishwasher. This is done only in stand- alone type of coffee shops and restaurants but not in kiosks etc.

Coffee Bean: All of the Coffee and Tea products, hot or cold are recommended. Packaged Sandwiches are recommended when bearing the CK or OK. We recommend any sealed product bearing a reliable Hechscher. A list can be found at www.kosherquest.org or on the KIB app.

Starbucks: All plain coffee without flavoring is Kosher. Starbuck's adds flavoring from a bottle which can easily be checked in the store for reliable Kosher certification. www.kosherstarbucks.com has a comprehensive listing. We recommend the first level. Due to a machinery issue of washing coffee pots with non-Kosher equipment, it is preferable not to use stand- alone/full service stores. Such stores often wash their coffee containers in the same dishwasher as non-Kosher utensils. Coffee kiosks, airports and other small coffee outlets, like those found in supermarkets etc. do not have this issue.

Cruise Ships and Hotels

Resorts, on occasion, advertise Kosher meals with full supervision. In cases where the facility does not include a Kosher kitchen, the hotel is usually happy to provide ample airline-style meals for its guests. These can be heated in the non-Kosher ovens as they are double wrapped for this purpose. In addition, one can order gourmet meals from caterers who specialize in mail order Glatt Kosher meals. These too are double wrapped and sealed to allow heating in a non-Kosher oven. Most of these establishments are most agreeable to provide cups of fruit upon request as well.

Restaurants and Caterers

One of the difficult decisions that one must make when choosing a Kosher Restaurant or Caterer is how to determine the Kosher standard and what separates one from the next.

One of the main determining factors as to the reliability of an establishment will be the level of Hashgacha provided. There are various types of food establishments and each may need different levels of supervision.

Meat restaurants or catering

In general needs Shomer Shabbos person on site at all times. This will exclude those restaurants that are owned and operated by their non- Shomer Shabbos owners and have occasional visits from the Rabbi.

Fish restaurants or catering:

The same as with meat applies.

Vegetarian/Vegan restaurants

The severe issue of insects is prevalent as well as non- Kosher wine, grape juice and oils being used among the ingredients.

Dairy or pizza restaurants

These often do not require Hashgacha Temidis. However, as will all of the above, each case may vary as to how much it must be watched.

Yogurt shops

A common ploy is for the non- Jewish or non- Shomer Shabbos owner or workers to put signs in front of the machines bearing a Hechscher, claiming to be using a mix from that reliable Hechscher. Obviously this is meaningless, as we cannot rely on such claims. Each store needs to be checked for certification on the store. Yogurtland, for instance, at this time only has one store certified RCC Kosher in the L.A. area and one in N.Y.

Ice cream stores

There are franchise stores that must use the company's product and one can assume that they are doing so as the penalty would be great if they vary. Then there are other types that are independent and are allowed to use many ingredients of their own choosing. These will need supervision on each and every individual store.

Maaris Ayin

A Jew who brings a Kosher burger into a McDonalds to meet a non- Jew who will be eating McDonalds non- Kosher food would be a classic case of Maaris Ayin. A normal person would have the right to assume that he sees the Jew eating a burger in a non- Kosher burger restaurant. However drinking water there, or eating something Kosher in a hotel continental breakfast would not be a problem.

Amusement Parks, Movie Theaters, Sport Stadiums

Dry roasted peanuts in the shell do not pose a problem. However, fresh popcorn cannot be used in any of the above locations. Even when the vendor displays a Kosher oil being used at this time, we have no way of ascertaining that non-Kosher oil was not used until now. If butter is being used it too may be of a non-Kosher origin. The beer and soda are often Kosher.

Take Out

Often this may resolve a situation where one needs to eat in a place that does not have Kosher food on hand. Whether in Alaska or Hawaii, cruise ship or plane, non-Kosher home or hotel, one can always have a gourmet meal on hand with proper preparation. Many reliable Kosher food outlets gladly ship food to anywhere in the world, be it a hotel, cruise line or other.

In general, when eating out, even in an establishment with proper certification, if there are any glaring "red flags", it should be brought to the attention of the certifying agency .
